International students are welcomed into Australia's friendly and inclusive society

Dr Debora Martins de Freitas

*Oceanographer and Research Fellow
Technological Institute of Aeronautics, Brazil*

“The Australian people are friendly, multicultural, easy to get used to, kind, and funny. The multicultural environment put me, for the first time, in contact with other cultures through students from Thailand, Indonesia, India, Cambodia, just to mention a few. And as a PhD student, I could learn with experts in my field and interact with many different perspectives, because most of the lecturers and researchers came from other countries as well. I always felt very welcomed and supported both professionally and personally.”

International students are welcomed into Australia's friendly and inclusive society

Chioma Adoabi Nzewi

*Master of International and Development
Economics,
Australian National University*

“While at ANU, I learned to use advanced economic analysis tools to interpret the effects of policy change and to formulate economic policies. I also enhanced my capacity in the use of statistical software, including Stata and E-Views, for budget forecasting and simulation... strengthened my public speaking, leadership and interpersonal skills, my ability to study online and to think out-of-the-box for effective budgeting.”
